WHAT'S LOVE GOT TO DO WITH IT?

‘What’s love got to do with it?’ You may start by singing this question in the r’n’b voice of the energetic grandmother. And I will scream back: ‘A lot!’ In Croatia, as in many other Eastern European countries, filmmaking is still alive, mostly as the fruit of persistent passion. In order to build up a decent filmmaking support system, as we have managed to do in Croatia, one often has to swim upstream, but one also has to walk in the clouds. Whenever a European film community persuades the powers that be to enact supportive film legislation and regulations, it feels like the adventure of a lifetime. And then, what a surprise: one of the rare things that works exactly as it is meant to in today’s Europe is the art, craft and industry of filmmaking! Croatia is no exception. How come? If we were to put the explanation into one word, let it be: love.

Cure

DIRECTOR Andrea Štaka
CH HR BA | 83' | psychological drama,
coming of age

Linda was born in Croatia, but grew up in Switzerland. The 14-year-old returns to Dubrovnik with her father in 1993, shortly after the war. Linda's new friend Eta takes her up to the dangerous forest above Dubrovnik. There, the two girls become entangled in an obsessive, sexually charged game of swapping identities. In a scuffle, Eta is sent hurtling to her death over a cliff. Left alone with her grief, Linda gradually takes her friend's place in the female household of Eta's mother and grandmother. She becomes entrapped in another world on the edge in which she is haunted by images of a strangely detached Eta. The tension between a precise portrayal of post-war Croatia and powerful inner images lends the film Cure suggestive and unsettling impact. Will Linda manage to find herself and her own identity again?

Svinjari · The Enchanting Porkers

DIRECTOR Ivan Livaković
7/2014 | 91' | black comedy, satire

Money is not enough anymore. Fame is the most sought-after currency. A journalist decides to do everything she can to get a scoop. She fabricates a story; she will stop at nothing: she will destroy lives if she has to. But her victims, we soon realise, are also addicted to the fame game. Set between reality and illusion, this satirical anti-musical deals with the media clichés that dominate our everyday lives.

FEATURE DOCUMENTARY FILM

MAD WORLD

If you want to learn what is going on in the world – watch documentaries. Is this really true? Some filmmakers like to tackle eternal topics like love or madness – but in a modern way. Some are very introspective – but not shy. And some discuss current affairs: media, geopolitical issues, or terrorism... One thing is certain, awards at major festivals in Berlin, Karlovy Vary, Rome and screenings at IDFA or Rotterdam are a true reflection of their unique vision. Love CROATIAN feature documentaries!

DIRECTOR Hrvoje Mabić
61'

In 2002, the psychiatric hospital at Lopača, near Rijeka, started admitting children with behavioural disorders. Soon, controversial stories about the hospital's treatment of children began to spread. This public secret is finally revealed in the painful testimonies of former patients, their parents and the doctors of Lopača Hospital. The film asks questions about moral responsibility, confronted by the shocking conformity of the hospital staff and the structures of the city government. In a reference to a Chinese proverb about three wise monkeys who 'hear no evil, see no evil, speak no evil', a definitive answer to the question 'who is the fourth monkey?' is finally revealed.

Danke Deutschland is an intimate documentary about the singers who performed Croatian patriotic songs in the early 1990s. Twenty years later, the director looks back at the musical propaganda that marked that short-lived period of national innocence and unity. In particular, the film traces the role of music in the Croatian War of Independence. It takes its title from one of the biggest hit songs of that era.

What is the purpose of 'the people' in films? Do they populate the streets, buses and trains, restaurants and dance halls simply to make the movie characters seem 'normal'? What would cinematic reality look like if the heroes were erased and the background characters and extras remained as the only inhabitants? We the People uses excerpts from famous movies and Guy Debord's Situationist texts to consider the nature and 'social' position of the individuals without individuality who surround our movie heroes – the only ones who are allowed to feel, suffer, or enjoy the drama of life on film.

Pješakov gambit Pawn's Gambit

A watchmaker contemplates the phenomenon of time from the perspective of a craftsman and a philosopher as he is seeing off the year 1999, which, for him, marks the end of the mechanical era. At the same time, the film portrays the outskirts of Zagreb. All the characters are played by children born in 1999, which symbolically binds the past and the present.

TK

Using an eight-part poem as the starting point, the artist constructs a complex polyphonic work in which poetry meets movement, sound, silence, bodies, and persistence, in order to project the ideas behind the work. The poem itself offers various images, beginning as a song of morning in which a question of routine and rotation carries the work towards more challenging imagery. People gather in dangerous constellations to act violently, observe silently, or to create a false sense of tranquillity that is constantly turned upside down by the various mechanisms of the film. Heavy objects get stuck in the throat, stones are used as tools and voices express a sensation of unrest.

DIRECTOR Aleš Suk, Željka Suková
6/2014 | 60'

The End of Light was inspired by the poem Journey to the End of the Route by Josip Sever. Sever's poem explores the importance of the journey as a goal in its own right. The filmmaker takes seven individuals and offers them a chance to fulfil their dreams: whether that dream is to be an orchestra conductor, a stage actor or a poet – or the desire to travel back in time or discover where the sun hides at night. The film gives its seven subjects a rare opportunity to be what they have always wanted to be – just for one day.
